EXPERTISE

- Law of architects and engineers
- Construction contracts
- Procurement law
- Legal management for large-scale projects JurProM®
- Project development and project management law

The key practice area for Mathias is the structuring of large-volume construction projects, from the initial project idea right through to exit, for private as well as public principals. The guiding principles of his approach to consulting are the avoidance of conflict, solution-oriented contract drafting and the timely provision of claim/anti-claim advice, in order to ensure successful project implementation. Mathias has a great passion for providing strategic advice to clients: in procurement procedures, construction projects or VgV procedures with integrated urban planning and architectural competitions. He also regularly advises public clients on the implementation of total contractor awards involving urban planning and architectural competitions, as the leading partner of a team of consultants. The projects supported by Mathias range from offshore wind farm projects in the German North Sea and the Baltic Sea, from approval and construction through to operation, to property development, school construction hospital, cultural and hydraulic engineering projects. Mathias regularly passes on his practical experience through presentations and through his visiting lectureship in construction law and construction management.
