EXPERTISE

- Restructuring and insolvency law
- Construction contracts
- Law of architects and engineers

Stefan advises and represents principals and contractors on issues surrounding construction and architects' law, and in particular on all aspects of (construction) insolvency law. This includes providing legal support for construction proceedings (both in and out-of-court) and the securing and enforcement of creditors' rights in the event of the insolvency of the contractual partner/another party to the construction project. A further key practice area is the provision crisis-related advice to managing directors and shareholders and advising on all issues relating to insolvency avoidance law to prevent imminent claims for repayment. A further focus is residential construction in property development schemes, together with the associated issues of condominium law.

His clients include public and private principals and contractor as well as large and medium-sized companies and private property owners.
